A demand for the release of Harry K. Thaw upon bail, pending a retrial on the charge of killing Stanford White will be made probably on Monday. His attorneys were today preparing for this step. The prospects of having to remain in the Tombs until October or November, awaiting his turn for another trial, has upset Thaw terribly, and every effort will be made to secure his freedom until he again faces the jury.

Thaw's famile is prepared to 150.

Victory for Jerome.

While a disagreement is ordinarily conceded as favoring a defendant's chances, District Attorney Jerome's friends today insist that the outcome in

With all be had to contend against With all he had to contend against and the great opportunity for the sympathy for the jurors to be aroused in Thaw's behalf, that he should have convinced seven of the jurors of the man's unqualified gult is regarded as a notable achievement. Credit for his victory is given to his masterly closing address. His portrayal of Thaw from the standpoint of the prosecution and the assembling of the evidence to preve his confention was undoubtedly the turning point of the trial. The jurors disappointment with Delmas gave Jerome his opening, and it was not overlooked.

Mrs. Peck is survived by a husband, three children, five grandchildren, and two great-grandchildren. Although no definite arrangements have yet been made for the funeral, it is expected that the Rev. Alfred Harding will conduct the services and that the interment will be in Cleveland.

Most of the jurors said that was satisfactory to them, and they buckled down to the case again with the determination to stick to it until a conclusion was reached?

Steele continued his warm appreciation of Mrs. Thaw's sacrifice and was praising her highly as a modern heroine, perhaps a greater one than any in fiction.

Thaw Needs Work,
Not Confinement,
Says a Lecturer

New York, April 13.—That hard work on a farm and not close confinement would be the worst punishment that could possibly be meted out to Harry Thaw is the opinion of Dr. Arnold Lorland, of Carlsbad, Germany, who lectured on "Pathogeny of Crime" before the College of Physicians at Thirteenth and Locust streets.

Thaw jury assembled about the long table to the room, with head about the room, with head and Juror Bernard Gerstman, No. 12, at the opposite end of the table.

"Gentlemen," said Foreman Smith, solemnly, "we had best proceed to this matter in a parliamentary manner, to avoid possible confusion. So, if there is no objection, that will be the rule, and I will preside."

"Just a moment, if you please, Mr. Foreman," spoke up one juror. "This is a most serious matter, on which depends the life of a fellow-man. I become the confused about the long table was conducted in a most orderly manner.

General Harries said this morning that as far as the places assigned to the troops at the cemetery was concerned no organization was given any prefer ence over any other. He explained that ence over any other. He explained that the Federal and District troops occupied locations on the sides of the President's stand, while the Spanish War Veterans were placed to the front. He disclaimed any attention on the part of himself or any member of the committee to slight the Spanish War men, and could not understand how any cause of dissatisfaction could have arisen.

As far as hearing the President's speech was concerned, he said that the veterans were located more favorably than any of the other troops on the grounds.
